Corporate Tax Association Appoints Second Assistant Director

The Corporate Tax Association is pleased to announce the appointment of Simon Staples, in a newly created second Assistant Director role for the CTA, for the first time in its 34-year history.

Simon has over 15 years' experience in corporate tax, most recently in a senior role with the Australian Petroleum Production & Exploration Association.

"We are really excited for Simon to be joining the CTA", said Executive Director Michelle de Niese. "Simon brings a wealth of experience in corporate tax, including time with the ATO and Treasury. His skills will help support CTA members, expand our services and improve our reach."

The CTA continues to grow its membership, now boasting 155 of Australia's largest corporates from all sectors of the economy. Simon's appointment will allow us to provide further support to our members and ensure the CTA continues to provide tax advocacy and other related professional development opportunities to our members.
